Washingtonian Magazine Recommends National Black Movie Day TM as an Event for Readers

Washington, DC – The National Black Movie Association (NBMA) today shares Washingtonian’s recognition of National Black Movie Day. The first annual event is featured in the February 2020 issue of Washingtonian as a highly recommended event. The magazine is currently on newsstands.

National Black Movie Day is a public awareness initiative to increase resources and support for aspiring filmmakers attending Historically Black Colleges and Universities. “To have a magazine with a wide reach like Washingtonian feature National Black Movie Day is an honor and helps us to spread the word about such an important event,” states National Black Movie Association Founder and President Agnes Moss. That support is critical to amplifying Black stories and we thank them for the recognition.”

National Black Movie Day will launch in Washington, DC on February 15, 2020. Visit www.blackmovieday.com for more information on the celebration and to learn how the general public can participate in efforts to raise awareness of Black storytelling, to support scholarship initiatives for aspiring Black filmmakers and to provide mentorship opportunities to students interested in pursuing careers in the film industry.

About National Black Movie Association:

Founded in 2019, National Black Movie Association is a nonprofit organization providing marketing, research and data for Black films, Black filmmakers and Black movie consumers. National Black Movie Day TM organizers are a group of Black filmmakers, Black film advocates, educators, psychologists, social influencers, journalists and moviegoers with the intent to increase recognition and contributions of Black Americans to the film industry.
